

What is magnetic stirring?

One of the most important features of a silver generator is a stirring mechanism. What makes The SilverLungs Generator unique is an automated "magnetic" stirring feature that does not require the production flask to be un-sealed. Most competing silver generators do not even include a stirring mechanism while the ones that do are the un-sealed type which leave the silver solution exposed to air-borne contaminants. This makes it difficult to check the solution for undesirable large particles - confusing dust and debris for undesirable large silver particles.

Simply deposit the magnetic stirring bar into the bottom of the production flask and once the generator begins production, the magnetic stirring bar will follow the built-in spinning magnet and create a very gentle and consistent stirring of the solution - creating no risk for loosening the silver hydroxide excess from the silver electrodes.

Other stirring methods include bubblers - yet this produces a very inconsistent and turbulent scenario that tends to loosen the excess silver hydroxide build-up and pull it into solution. This creates for a very messy end product.

The silver solutions produced with The SilverLungs Generator are extremely clean and excess-free when following the simple protocol for production. There is also a protocol to control the ion vs. particle ratio which will produce colloidal-rich solutions that are suggested more for the nasal, stomach and digestive environment.
