

What is a TDS water test meter?

This TDS digital water test meter is vital to test the initial quality of your distilled water and also measures the amount of dissolved silver ions in your final solution. This item is not included with The SilverLungs Generator "Base Kit" to accommodate those who already own a proper TDS water test meter.

The TDS water test meter (is) included with The SilverLungs Generator "Deluxe Kits" along with our most popular accessories. The TDS water test meter comes pre-calibrated saving time with initial setup and there is also an included calibration solution in the event you wish to recalibrate your meter after extended use.

Always remember that the only form of silver that can be measured with the TDS water test meter is ionic content and not the particle/colloidal content.

When using the test meter on a completed silver solution, always subtract the initial PPM reading from your final measurement and this will give you the silver concentration in PPM.

As a good standard precaution to prevent contamination of the highly reactive ionic silver, always pre-rinse the inner and outer tube of the test meter with distilled water to ensure that no contaminants are deposited into the solution when taking new measurements.
